

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

where we bloom

A new book featuring inspiring floral studios + workshops

Are you a Slow Flowers' florist, designer, farmer-florist or cut flower grower?

Please consider submitting your creative space to be featured in this book!
We're interested in your beautiful, naturally lit, plant- and flower-filled settings, including studios, workshops, potting sheds/greenhouses, pop-up shops, flower trucks/mobile florists and on-farm spaces where designers and makers "bloom."

HOW TO SUBMIT

Please provide 12 images including you, your studio environment, your activities and floral art by way of a downloadable link to a folder or gallery on your website. Please include a variety of detail, mid-range and overview shots, as well as your name, name of your business, and contact information. The images do not need to be high-res for our review, but we will require hi-res imagery for final publication. Photographers will be asked to complete a Photography Agreement granting permission for publication.

Deadline: October 1, 2020

AN IMPRINT OF SLOW FLOWERS

ABOUT BLOOM. Founded by Debra Prinzing and Robin Avni, BLOOM identifies, develops, and publishes projects (books, magazines, and other photo-driven printed and digital products) that shine a light on the Slow Flowers lifestyle, its people, flowers, gardens, and farms. BLOOM's projects reveal the authentic voice and vision of each contributor, illustrated with beautiful imagery and strong graphic design concepts. Our projects engage readers in a new relationship with flowers, inspiring them to take action in their own lives.
